Institute of Government and Public Policies
Dear supporters

You are holding the report that collects IGOP’s research activity and training for the period 2014-15.

The researchers at our institute continue to offer high quality studies and make a significant impact on the world of research, both nationally and internationally. Our hope is that these studies may also have a significant impact on Society.

In addition to our traditional attention to social and urban policies, during the last period, the analysis of urban segregation, the role of the Internet in politics and collaborative production, and the study of social innovation have gained weight in our research portfolio. In this period, we have made a great effort for these research lines to be also translated into social action and transfer activities.

We are redefining our training opportunities: from having our own doctoral program we have passed to one which is shared with the Departments of Political Science and Public Law, and of International Relations.

We have joined forces to make a leap in quality and international projection. After a decade of growth, this year, the Master in Social and Community Policies is having a technical pause while waiting for its consolidation as an official master, and we decided to cease offering the Postgraduate in Cooperative Economy. Instead, we have made interesting alliances between university, public administrations and social movements which have led to a Postgraduate Course in Agro-Ecological Local Regeneration (which we promote in conjunction with ICTA), the Laboratory of Social Services and the EstArter project (platform building project of collective entrepreneurship), which has been very well received so far.

We aspire to be able to contribute, along with many other colleagues, to the accumulation of knowledge that does not conflict between academic rigour and social utility; and does not understand the latter only as a business return.

Progress cannot be understood without putting social justice at the centre of development, the fight against inequality, inclusion of the most disadvantaged in standard social dynamics, aspiration to provide societies with democracy of a higher quality, and a priority consideration to ensure the sustainability of life.

INSTITUTE OF GOVERNMENT AND PUBLIC POLICY (IGOP)

Origins and Objectives

The IGOP was created with the aim of promoting research, training and social transfer in the field of government and public policy, always from an interdisciplinary approach and, above all, with the ability to combine academic excellence with an impact on social reality.

These two objectives are fully reflected in its activities: research and training.

Research

We undertake both competitive research projects (projects essentially driven by the European Commission, the Government of Spain - R & D projects or others - or by the Government of the Generalitat of Catalonia) and applied research through agreements or specific commissions with various institutions and other entities.

We have a broad research portfolio, as shown in this report, mainly focused on the study of the activities of public authorities and their relations with stakeholders. Currently our research areas are grouped based on three main axes:

1. Governance and democratic innovation.
2. Analysis and management of public policies.
3. New technologies, social networks and public assets.

Training

We combine a PhD Program in Public Policy and Social Transformation - shared with two departments of the UAB from the 2014-15 course - with various masters’ degrees, postgraduate studies and other non-regulated teaching offers. The doctorate is specifically oriented towards academic excellence, while the other programs, without sacrificing quality, are aimed more directly at the professional world, to facilitate a strong relationship between the university and its socioeconomic environment.
In short, the IGOP was born as a commitment to articulate the scientific knowledge and social commitment, combining rigorous and quality academic work with a rooting in the reality around us and of which we are part.

At the same time, the IGOP wishes to be a forum for debate, knowledge generation, collective learning and impact on social transformation processes.

IGOP School: a space for transfer and social innovation

The IGOP has a space provided by the city of Barcelona in Nou Barris, where we located the School of Social and Urban Policy (IGOP School).

This facility, in addition to hosting the usual activities of a research centre - such as visits of researchers, project meetings, study days or training activities -, is undertaking a project, stemming from the desire to create a university space where it is possible to generate processes of social transfer and shared construction of knowledge. Knowledge that must be useful for a transformative practice: to build a fairer, more inclusive and more democratic society.

With these purposes, a wide range of activities is promoted and organized by the School. Although detailed in the annexes, we would like to mention the axes that form their backbone here:

- Establish relationships and create a network with multiple social stakeholders
- Use these relationships to promote research, training or discussion initiatives with a vocation for shared learning and impact on reality.
- Accommodate both formal and informal training activities
- Promote applied research in the areas of community work and social innovation
WHO ARE WE?

The people who are part of IGOP can be said to fall into three connected circles:

- The core, made up of the directors, coordination, management, researchers and technical and administrative support.

- The circle of people currently linked.

- The network of institutions with which we have agreements or maintain more-or-less regular relationships and people who collaborate or have collaborated with the Institute.

Related Parties and Relations Network

Besides the stable core, the IGOP during this biennium has functioned thanks to:

- Contracted researchers: 39 people
- Doctoral students: 40 people
- Master students and postgraduates: 107 people (data from 2014 to 2015)

In addition, we have established a network of relationships, through agreements and/or other forms of collaboration with different universities, both at state and European level and/or American countries. We also maintain stable ties with other public institutions.

We have also built a stable relationship with Third Sector organizations, social movements and the cooperative sector. Finally, we relate more sporadically with Foundations and/or consultants.

RESEARCH PROGRAM

To achieve the objectives of promoting research, training and social transfer, IGOP has built up an extensive research program, becoming a reference centre in the field of social sciences.

We have undertaken research on many public policies (education, social cohesion, water, environment, gender, consumption or health) and we have also discussed very diverse concepts (capacity for innovation, governance, citizen participation, new public management, crosscutting or new technologies).

However, we could summarize our current research program from the two large current research groups recognized by the Generalitat de Catalunya: AGAPP and URGOCIS.

AGAPP (Analysis, Management and Evaluation of Public Policies)

Beyond the generic analysis of public policies, we have focused the attention of our research in the following aspects:

• Public administration and management
• Analysis and evaluation of public policies
• Governance and deliberative administration
• Innovation and public policy
• Social cohesion and public policy
• Institutional regeneration and strengthening of democracy

URGOCIS (Urban Governance, Commons, Internet and Social Innovation)

In a context that we have defined as a true change of era, we have focused the research program both within the study of this change and the responses that institutions and, above all, society itself are making to adapt to the new situation. In particular, the priority lines of research are currently:

• Urban regeneration policies: neighbourhoods in crisis and territorial segregation
• Internet and its impact on the emergence of a new policy
• Common assets and the capacity for social innovation

Training

We combine three types of training records: doctoral, masters and postgraduate courses, and specific offers.

TRAINING ACTIVITIES

In IGOP, as a university institute, training is one of the pillars of our activity. In addition, aligned with our goals, we combine three types of training records: a doctoral program, master’s degrees and postgraduate courses, and specific training offers.

Doctorate in Politics, Policies and International Relations
This program is offered jointly with the departments of Political Science and International Relations, as well as the Department of Public Law and Legal Historical Sciences of the UAB. It is directed specifically to people aimed at developing an academic career.

Masters and Postgraduate studies
Directed to the training of people who intend to expand their professional skills or open to reflect on different aspects of social and territorial intervention:

- Masters (Interuniversity) in Social and Community Mediation Policies (IGOP-UAB, UB, UdG, UdL, UVic, URV)
- Master Interuniversity in Public Management (UAB-UB-UPF)
- Postgraduate in Cooperative Economy (IGOP-UAB, Aposta SCCL, Labcooop)
- Postgraduate in Public Space (UOC-IGOP-CCCB)
- Postgraduate in Local Revitalisation and Agroecology (IGOP-UAB-ICTA)

Specific training offers.
An unregulated training offer allows us to address a broader public with the will to directly affect the environment:

- EstArter programme
- IGOP Summer School
- Social Services Laboratory
- Urban Knowledge Circles
- Seminars and Study days
